

THE INSECURE MOTH

BY RHEA
DHUNGEL

Luna is just a regular little green caterpillars.
However, hanging out with her best friends
Aizel, Ivelle, Sage, and Aideen make her feel anything but ordinary.

The five little caterpillars decided that today was the perfect day to have a tea party.

Once the five little caterpillars finished their tea party, they started to begin the journey back to their home in the leaves.

The journey was quite the crawl. So once the five little caterpillars got back home, they were exhausted and decided to rest in the lounge room.

Luna and her friends were all tucked into bed and ready to go to sleep when all of a sudden, Sage raised a question that the five little caterpillars have been thinking about all day...

Do you guys
think we're ready to become butterflies?

I'm not sure, do you guys think we are ready?

said Aizel.

We're ready guys! We have been dreaming of becoming butterflies ever since we were baby larva.

said Ivelle.

I think we're ready guys!

said Sage.

I don't know guys...

said Aideen.

I agree with Ivelle, I think we are ready. We should do it. Tomorrow.

said Luna.

There was a loud silence in the room and everyone turned to look at her

TOMORROW?!

A green, rounded alien character with two antennae and large, black eyes with white outlines. It has a wide, open-mouthed smile showing its tongue. The character is positioned on the left side of the frame. A white speech bubble is attached to its mouth, containing the text "Yeah, why not?". The background consists of vertical green stripes of varying shades. At the bottom, there is a pink horizontal band.

Yeah, why not?

We're nowhere near ready and you want us to become butterflies tomorrow??

said Aizel.

Come on Aizel, you're just overreacting now. Luna is right, we're ready to become butterflies!

said Ivelle.

Guys listen to Ivelle and Luna. We're 100% ready.

said Sage.

I think we are more than ready, I mean we are eventually going to be turning into butterflies so why not do it now?

said Luna.

You're out of your mind Luna!

said Aideen.

The five little caterpillars argued back and forward, until they finally agreed that they were all ready to become butterflies.

The background is a light pink color with a pattern of white, vertically-oriented ovals. In each of the four corners, there is a decorative floral flourish consisting of black outlines of vines, leaves, and small pink flowers. A horizontal strip of light brown, textured paper with a torn edge is centered across the middle of the page.

The Next Day...

The next morning the five little caterpillars woke up and got ready for the big day ahead of them. Because today was the day they were becoming butterflies.

After getting ready for the big day, the five little caterpillars began their journey to the forest and spent hours and hours trying to find the perfect tree branch to create their cocoons. Little did they know that becoming a butterfly would take a total of three weeks.

3 Weeks Later...

Once the five little caterpillars finished completing their transformation, they broke free from their cocoons revealing the beautiful butterflies they had become. However, something unsuspecting happened when Luna revealed herself. Instead of becoming a butterfly she became a moth.

These wings are so beautiful.

said Ivelle.

I'm so glad we decided
to become butterflies.

said Aizel.

These wings are so cool,
I love them.

said Aideen.

My wings are gorgeous, I love this shade of purple.

said Sage.

Yeah, i guess i like
my wings too.

said Luna.

As the five friends started to fly back to their home in the leaves, Luna started to grow more insecure and found herself comparing her wings to her butterfly friends. Luna began to sink into a deep state of panic and was struggling to process the fact that she became a moth instead of a butterfly.

While the five friends were flying, Aizel, Ivelle, Sage, and Aideen noticed that Luna was upset and asked her if she was okay. When asked Luna only continued to cry and keep quiet.

What's wrong
Luna?

said Ivelle.

Yeah are you okay?

said Aizel.

You seem upset Luna. Is everything okay?

said Aideen.

Yeah what's wrong? Come on you can tell us we're
your friends.

said Sage.

No guys, I'm not okay. I feel ugly and hate the way my wings look. Why couldn't I have beautiful wings like
you guys?

said Luna.

There's no reason for you to feel insecure, you're beautiful just the way you are!

said Ivelle.

Yeah I agree with Ivelle, and besides I think your wings are stunning

said Aizel.

Luna there's no need for you to compare yourself to others! you are perfect just the way you are.

said Aideen.

And there's no need for you to change anything about yourself Luna!

said Sage.

Thank you so much guys! you all made me so much better and more confident.

said Luna.

Now let's go
home.

said Ivelle.

Yeah let's go
home.

said Luna.

The five friends finally got back to their home in the leaves and got ready to go to sleep. The five little friends lived happily ever after and Luna never felt the need to feel insecure ever again.

A decorative border of green vines with leaves frames the text. The vines are thin and curved, with small, dark green leaves scattered along them. The background is a light green color with a pattern of darker green, vertically-oriented oval shapes.

And just like Luna we can all learn to love ourselves just
the way we are.

And remember everyone,
you are perfect just the way
you are.

The End

THE INSECURE MOTH

Luna is a regular little caterpillar that enjoys the company of her beloved friends Aizel, Ivelle, Sage, and Aideen. However, one great big decision to become a butterfly may change the way her friends look at her and most importantly change the way she looks at herself. Will Luna be able to battle her insecurities and learn to love herself?